

STOP CHILD EXECUTIONS IN IRAN

According to the United Nations, a child is a person under the age of 18. Despite the fact that the government of Iran has signed International Covenants that forbid them to execute anyone who has allegedly committed an offence before the age of 18, they continue to do so.

Amnesty International has documented 28 executions of child offenders in Iran since 1990. In many cases, these minors have been imprisoned until the age of 18 and then executed.

Currently there are at least 80
minors on death row in Iran

An international campaign has been started to save the lives of these prisoners and end the executions of child offenders in Iran.
